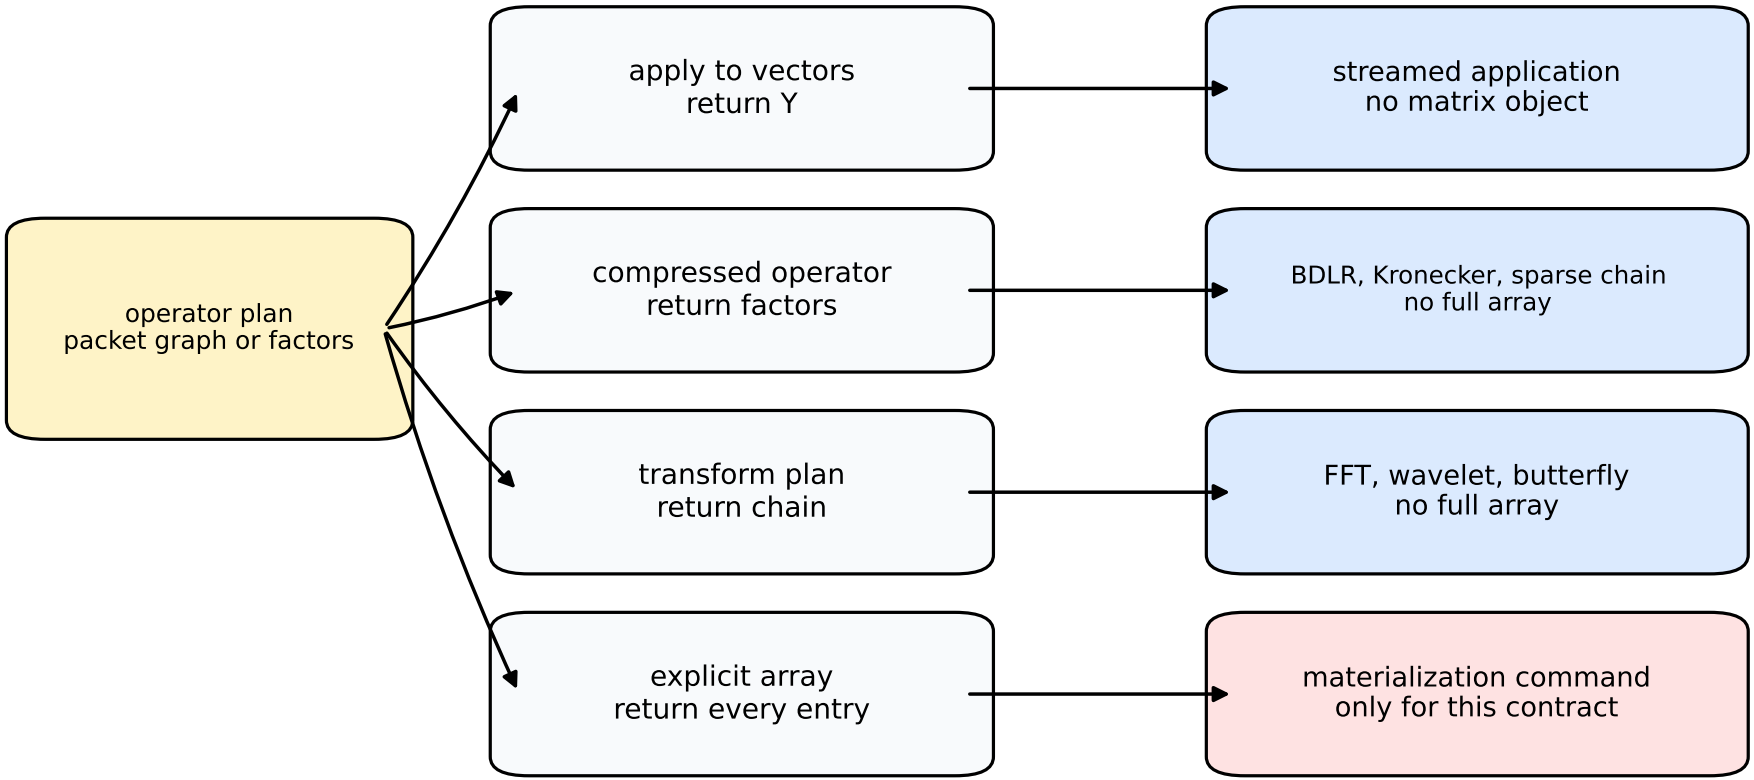
Output contracts determine whether materialization is needed



The architecture preserves the requested mathematical result, not an unnecessary intermediate representation.