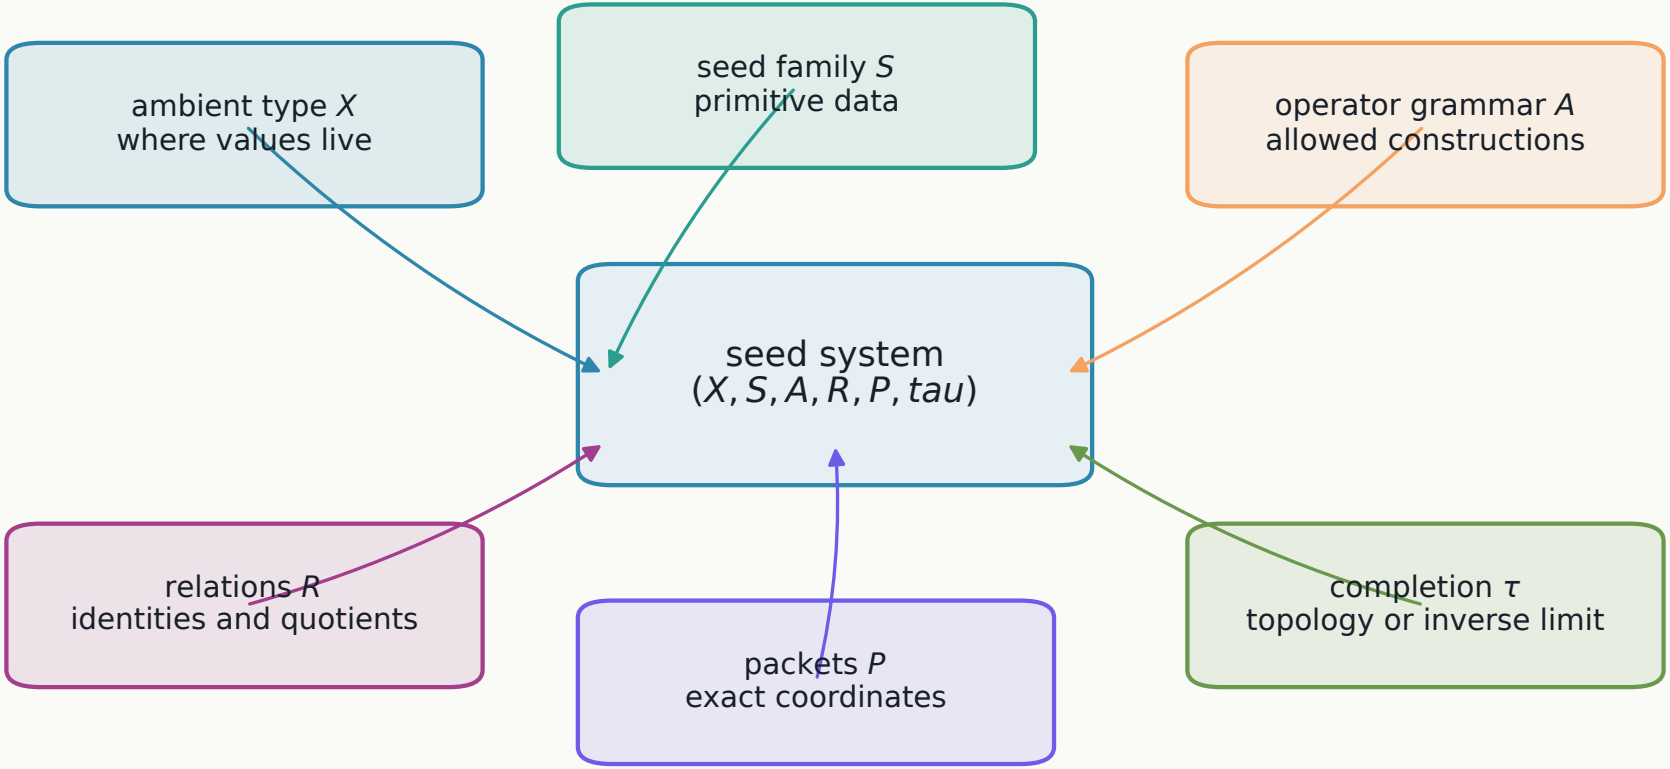
The typed seed system separates data from the rules that act on it



A universality claim is meaningful only when the grammar and relations are fixed before the target object is encoded.